

XM Satellite Radio demonstrates what our economy is all about. By providing a superior service relative to their AM/FM counterparts, they provide consumers with a choice. Competition in the market place delivers value and options to the market place. In a competitive market place, we have the opportunity for superior products, service, and choices. That is exactly what XM Radio provides.

During my long commute to/from work, I appreciate having a valuable service like XM radio. Their regional traffic channels are a great addition to the XM Service. Their array of programming and their accuracy in reporting traffic conditions far exceeds anything available AM/FM. XM Radio should be allowed to continue providing its high level of service. If the market place will support it, it will survive. If AM/FM channels want to survive, they will find innovative ways to improve their service. When done right, the consumer wins. Please allow XM Satellite Radio to be allowed to continue providing us with a better choice.
